

GM'S REPORT

Investing in community

Being a member of Firelands Electric Cooperative means being part of something extraordinary.

Founded in 1936, Firelands Electric brought electricity to areas that had none. When investor-owned utility companies refused to bring electricity to rural locations, neighbors banded together to fulfill a critical need in our community. Concerned local leaders went door-to-door, encouraging people to join the cooperative and invest in new technology that would change their lives — and continues to have an impact to this day.

In the early years of Firelands Electric Cooperative, members of the community understood we were different. They remembered when the lights came on for the first time or they knew someone who helped establish the co-op. For most people, our founding and its circumstances have long been forgotten. Over time, folks in the community may have come to think of us as just another energy provider.

But that is not the case. Simply put, we are not a corporation — we are a not-for-profit cooperative run by our members, for our members. Firelands Electric members guide important decisions that improve and enrich the co-op and the community. By electing board representatives from their own neighborhoods, members have a voice in how the cooperative operates.

Unlike most other businesses, your cooperative is not about profits. The money Firelands Electric receives when members pay their bills does not go to shareholders. These dollars go toward paying expenses, are returned to our members in the form of capital credits, or are reinvested in the co-op.

To celebrate National Co-op Month, Firelands Electric Cooperative will be giving one FREE LED lightbulb to the first 200 members who visit our office at 103 Industrial Drive, New London, during the month of October.

Circulating close to home, this money helps strengthen the local economy and the community.

Your co-op's concern for community sets us apart from other companies. Firelands Electric offers scholarships to students and provides electrical safety training to first responders. From sponsoring the county fair to helping a local business with its energy efficiency needs, we stand as a driving force in our community.

Dan McNaull
GENERAL MANAGER

This October, Firelands Electric joins tens of thousands of other cooperatives in celebrating National Cooperative Month. These co-ops represent every sector of the U.S. economy, from utilities and credit unions to insurance and farmers. In fact, one in three Americans are members of some type of cooperative. Firelands Electric is just one of 900 electric cooperatives across the country that exist solely to provide safe, reliable, and technologically advanced service to 42 million Americans.

Your cooperative is member focused and community driven. Our members and our community are at the heart of what we do. Just as the communities we serve are constantly changing, Firelands Electric Cooperative is always evolving to meet our members' needs. And we are able to do this because of members like you.

RATES

UNDERSTANDING YOUR MONTHLY STATEMENT

As a member of Firelands Electric Cooperative, you make an investment in the co-op every time you pay your bill. So what exactly is this monthly investment, and how do you benefit from it?

The distribution charge on your monthly bill statement is a fixed investment that helps your co-op cover the expenses of maintaining the overall electrical system. Maintaining poles, wires, substations, meters, and other co-op equipment takes strategic planning and significant resources. The distribution charge is also used to cover insurance and taxes, as well as the routine upkeep of trucks, computers, and software. Essentially, this fixed cost ensures that all of Firelands Electric Cooperative's equipment operates properly and that employees are trained and ready so the lights turn on when you need them.

Regardless of how much electricity a family uses, the cost of delivering power to a home is the same. Think of it like a car. Whether you drive 500 miles a month or 5,000 miles a month, you still have to keep your car in working condition so that it starts each and every time you turn the key. The same goes for electricity: The cooperative's equipment must be maintained to ensure electricity is there whenever you press a power button or flip a switch.

Since everyone benefits from the same service, the cooperative's regular residential members are all charged the same $34 per month for their distribution charge. About 98% of Firelands Electric's 9,100 members are residential. The remaining 2% have other types of electric service, such as grain-drying or commercial three-phase service, and those members have a different fixed distribution charge based on the operational costs for their particular type of service. This rate structure gives each member an equal share in the cooperative and its operating costs.

There is also a variable component on your monthly statement called the kilowatt-hour (kWh) charge. This is where how much electricity you use comes into play. Just like you pay for gas by the gallon to operate your car, you buy electricity by the kilowatt-hour. If your car gets 20 miles per gallon and it's a 20-mile roundtrip drive to work, you have to purchase one gallon of gas at the current market price. Likewise, if using your oven for one hour a day uses 100 kWh of electricity per month, you pay for that 100 kWh at the kilowatt-hour rate of $0.1035 (i.e., $10.35 for 100 kWh).

While the amount of your kWh charge varies each month depending upon how much electricity you used, your fixed monthly distribution charge is an investment to ensure you have access to safe, reliable, and affordable power whenever you need it. We appreciate and value the investment our members make in the co-op each month, and we strive to use that investment wisely for the benefit of our entire community.

You can also contact Firelands Electric Cooperative's billing department at 1-800-533-8658 or email them at billing@firelandsec.com.

What can you get for only a penny?

It costs just one penny to power a 9-watt LED lightbulb (the equivalent of a 60-watt incandescent bulb) for 11 hours. Now that's a great value!

OUTAGE RESTORATION

KEEPING TABS ON POWER OUTAGES

When co-op members are suddenly and unexpectedly without power, Firelands Electric occasionally receives questions about the exact location of the outage. Often, a member is away from home and trying to determine if they are being affected. Other times, members ask simply out of curiosity.

When an outage occurs, Firelands Electric Cooperative turns to Facebook, the homepage of its website, and the online outage map to keep members informed of the general area being impacted. The co-op typically lists the number of members affected and the county and township involved.

Firelands doesn't, however, list the exact location, and this is for the sake of both its crews and its members.

During an outage, safety is top priority. Anytime that power lines are involved, a dangerous situation can arise. Firelands Electric Cooperative wants to do everything possible to protect its linemen and the public. For example, when a vehicle accident results in a broken utility pole, downed power lines can remain energized, causing a potential hazard. The more people who know precisely where the accident took place, the more likely it is for someone to want to take a look at the situation. This can create a major safety concern. Spectators could unintentionally cause a dangerous situation for the co-op's linemen, as well as put themselves in harm's way.

Reporting the specific outage site also makes the co-op's members more vulnerable. If it becomes public knowledge that certain homes are without electric power, those living in the area would be more at risk for vandalism, theft, or other crimes. Outdoor lighting and security systems, for instance, would no longer be operational and unable to protect members' homes or property.

In addition to safety concerns, revealing the exact location of an outage could also create extra traffic in the area, which could interfere with the work of the co-op's line crews and slow down the restoral process for everyone involved.

This brings up another key concern: If the co-op doesn't identify the exact site of an outage, how can members stay informed? Firelands Electric Cooperative's SmartHub offers cutting-edge tools to keep members in the know. By signing up for the app's service notifications, members can monitor outages at their home or business.

Advanced technology allows participants to receive outage information for their individual account. Members can enroll multiple email addresses and phone numbers to have any combination of emails or text messages delivered directly to their electronic devices. Notifications are available for a power outage, a power outage restored, and a planned power outage. Even if you are away from home, you can know when the power goes out and when it comes back on. By just clicking "Report an Issue" (on a computer) or "Service Status" (on a mobile device), members can advise the cooperative of an outage at their location with the simple tap of a button!

To sign up or to learn more about Firelands Electric Cooperative's SmartHub outage notifications, visit www.firelandsec.com/content/smarthub-101.

CO-OP NEWS

ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE

The next drawing is Dec. 10.

For complete details on how to enter, visit www.firelandsec.com/content/team.

Congrats!
